financial literacy program

Curriculum guide

MoneyMasters

BY MODERN WOODMEN

Program summary

The mission of the course is to provide students from kindergarten through 12th grade with financial literacy and personal finance education to help them thrive and meet their financial and personal goals. The course will present concepts that align with the National Standards in K-12 Personal Finance Education, published by the Jump$tart Coalition for Personal Financial Literacy and Common Core State Standards.

Overview

The course primarily aims to improve student knowledge of financial literacy concepts and individual behaviors toward financial management. The course is designed as best-in-class blended learning, which pairs interactive and engaging digital sequences with in-class discussions, extension activities and opportunities to engage a wider community to support students' understanding of and behaviors with personal finance.

The course has four grade bands (K-2, 3-5, 6-8 and 9-12). Each band has 5 blended learning lessons composed of an online sequence (for K-2, a video) and teacher-facilitated lessons. The digital sequences (or videos) kick off lessons by building background knowledge and engaging students in problem-based scenarios, which they will debrief together. The teacher-facilitated lessons extend the digital learning through class discussions, checks for understanding and extension activities.

Standards

Each of the 5 lessons centers on one personal finance domain in the Jump$tart National Standards: spending and saving, credit and debt, employment and income, investing, and risk and insurance. By addressing each domain in the lessons, students will be equipped with a comprehensive understanding of personal finance.

This curriculum guide also identifies the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) to which each lesson plan aligns. The standard code is listed in the detailed lesson description section. For a summary of each standard, review the list of Jump$tart standards beginning on page 11 and CCSS starting on page 15.

Educators can download a list of the specific in-class and take-home activities aligned with the CCSS within the Detailed Common Core State Standards Alignment document available as an offline resource within the MoneyMasters program site.
